AFFIDAVIT OF MICHAEL B. HUDDLESTON

STATE OF TEXAS §
COUNTY OF BRAZOS §

BEFORE ME, the undersigned authority, on this day personally appeared Michael B. Huddleston, who is personally known to me, and after being first duly sworn according to law upon his oath, deposed and stated as follows:

“My name is Michael B. Huddleston. I am over eighteen years of age and have never been convicted of a felony or a crime involving moral turpitude. The statements made by me in this Affidavit are based upon my personal knowledge and are true and correct.

1. “I am currently employed by Texas A&M University (“Texas A&M”) and am authorized to make this Affidavit on behalf of Texas A&M. I have been employed by Texas A&M since January 1996, and my title is currently that of Executive Director and University Contract Officer, Department of Contract Administration. My duties as Executive Director and Contract Officer include, but are not limited to, monitoring and overseeing issues related to licensing of Texas A&M's intellectual property rights, including trademark rights.

2. "I am one of the employees at Texas A&M charged with oversight and protection of Texas A&M's trademarks "12th MAN" and "12th MANIA!".

3. "Texas A&M is a university with long standing traditions. One of the most time-honored is that of the "12TH MAN".

4. "Texas A&M's story of the "12th MAN" began on January 2, 1922, and as the story goes, an underdog Aggie team was playing Centre College, then the nations' top ranked football team. As the game wore on and the Aggies dug deeply into their limited reserves, Coach Dana X. Bible remembered a member of the football squad who was not in uniform. This "12th MAN", B. King Gill ("Gill"), was in the press box during the game helping reporters identify the Texas A&M football players. Gill was called from the stands, suited up, and stood ready throughout the rest of the football game against Centre College, which Texas A&M finally won 22-14. When the game ended, Gill was the only man left standing on the sidelines for the Aggies, and Gill's gesture came to be known as the "12th MAN" since he had accepted the call to help his team and stood ready for duty in the event that the eleven Texas A&M football players needed assistance. That spirit of readiness for service and desire to support has grown vigorously throughout the years, and it evolved into the entire student body at Texas A&M being known at Texas A&M as the "12th MAN" and they stand during the entire football game to show their support. Texas A&M has also used the "12th MAN" on a variety of goods and services including towels, flags, shirts, buttons, and other assorted merchandise.

5. "On September 4, 1990, Texas A&M University received a trademark from the United States Patent and Trademark Office for "12th MAN", Registration No. 1,612,053, for goods and services, including bumper stickers, post cards, note cards, novelty buttons, towels, hats, t-shirts, polo-type shirts, golf shirts, sweaters, shorts, athletic uniforms, and college scholarship services. A true and correct copy of the trademark registration is attached hereto as Exhibit "A".

6. "On January 16, 1996, Texas A&M University received a second trademark from the United States Patent and Trademark Office for "12th MAN", Registration No. 1,948,306, for goods and services, including jewelry and entertainment services, namely organizing and conducting intercollegiate sporting events. A true and correct copy of the trademark registration is attached hereto as Exhibit "B".

7. "On September 15, 1998, Texas A&M University received a trademark from the United States Patent and Trademark Office for "12th MANIA!". Registration No. 2,189,229, for goods and services, including plastic drinking containers, glass beverage glassware, mugs, and tumblers, textiles and textile goods, namely towels and flags, clothing, namely jackets, caps, t-shirts, and shirts, and fund raising services, through direct mail solicitation, for athletics, scholarship and support. A true and correct copy of the trademark registration is attached hereto as Exhibit "C".

8. "The Seattle Seahawks have been using the 12th MAN in advertisements, promotions on their website and on merchandise. The Seattle Seahawks have been raising the number 12 flag at their football games and on national television and on information and belief, the Seattle Seahawks have distributed 12th MAN flags during the NFC Championship Football game held on January 23, 2006 and have also distributed 12th MAN buttons during the NFC Divisional playoff game held on January 16, 2006.

9. "Texas A&M, through counsel, sent cease and desist letters to the Seattle Seahawks beginning in 2004, and the Seattle Seahawks responded and acknowledged that Texas A&M has trademark rights in the 12th MAN and offered to remove the references to the 12th MAN off their website and from their magazines. A true and correct copy of the letter from Mark H. Zietlow, counsel for Texas A&M, to Lance A. Lopes dated December 7, 2004 is attached hereto as Exhibit "D". A true and correct copy of the letter from Lance A. Lopes to Mark H. Zietlow, counsel for Texas A&M dated December 20, 2004 is attached hereto as Exhibit "E". A true and correct copy of the letter from Mark H. Zietlow, counsel for Texas A&M, to Lance A. Lopes dated January 10, 2005 is attached hereto as Exhibit "F".

10. "The Seattle Seahawks never pulled these references, and as late as November 7, 2005, the Seattle Seahawks sent correspondence to Texas A&M again acknowledging Texas A&M's trademark and Texas A&M's "desire to preserve its rights in its trademark" and stated that they would not use the term with the sale of any merchandise. A true and correct copy of the letter from Lance A. Lopes to Mark H. Zietlow, counsel for Texas A&M dated November 7, 2005 is attached hereto as Exhibit "G".

RE: Texas A&M University Trademark Infringement

Dear Mr. Lopes:

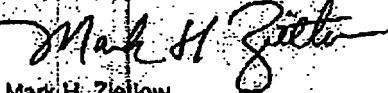

Thank you for your letter, dated October 25, 2004, stating that the Seattle Seahawks would remove the references to the "12th Man" from its website and game day magazine. In reviewing the website, as a follow-up, we still note that there are references to "12th Man." In particular, there is a reference to "A 12th Man Salute," a "12th Man Suite Lottery," and a note titled "12th Man Bandanas" which reads "Thank you to Budweiser for providing Monday Night Football bandanas to the 12th Man!"

Furthermore, it is my understanding that the Seattle Seahawks raised the "12th Man Flag" during their nationally televised Monday Night Football game.

Please follow-up on these other situations to ensure that such use is discontinued. Please confirm to me that the other uses have been discontinued as well.

Thank you for your anticipated cooperation.

Very truly yours,

Mark H. Ziffelaw

Re: Texas A&M University Infringement

Dear Mr. Zienlow:

I am in receipt of your December 7, 2004 letter claiming that the Seahawks are infringing upon Texas A&M's trademark rights. Football Northwest LLC is the formal entity doing business as the Seattle Seahawks ("FNW").

Based upon a number of factors FNW believes it has a valid legal basis to defend its use of the "12th Man" in conjunction with its activities here in Seattle. In brief, FNW believes Texas A&M would have a difficult and expensive task of proving the essential element of confusion based upon our activities. In addition, there is the risk that the trademarked phrase could be deemed too descriptive and general in nature as to be enforceable. The "12th Man" is often used in common parlance when referring to the fans of teams. Pursuing these defenses, however, will be expensive and involve risk for both parties.

As I mentioned in our phone conversation, FNW understands Texas A&M's desire to preserve its rights in its trademark the "12th Man". As such, we would suggest that a nominal rights fee be paid to Texas A&M for a specific, narrow and limited use of the phrase. Specifically, we are seeking the right to use the term in reference to our fans as a whole in conjunction with local market activities (promotions) and stadium activities, including our pre-game flag raising ritual. We are not attempting to profit from this usage. We will abandon all usage of the term on our website. We also will not use the term in conjunction with our game day magazine title, or in the sale of any merchandise. For this limited right, we believe a one time license payment of $10,000 for a 10 year use period would be appropriate. This solution preserves your rights, limits our scope and becomes a source of income.

I look forward to your response to our proposal.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Lopes:

Texas A&M University is continuing to review your proposal in your letter dated December 20, 2004. We estimate it may take up to 60 days to evaluate the proposal. We will get back to you with a response as soon as the review process is completed.

Please understand that this letter is not to be construed as a waiver or release of any of the claims and demands made in our letter dated December 7, 2004. Texas A&M University continues to be of the opinion that the use of "12th Man®" by the Seattle Seahawks violates the Federal, State and common-law rights of Texas A&M University in 12th Man®.

Re: Texas A&M University Trademark Infringement

Dear Mr. Zietlow:

I am in receipt of your October 27, letter. If you will recall, last December the Seahawks made your client a generous offer to permit a limited use of the "12th Man" in its marketing/branding activities. You responded to us in a letter dated January 10, 2005, that you would take up to 60 days to consider the offer and respond back to us. We have yet to hear back on that offer.

Our position has not changed. We retired the "12" jersey in early 1980's as a tribute to our fans' support and it has hung in our rafters ever since. FNW believes it has a valid legal basis to defend its use of the "12th Man" in conjunction with its activities in Seattle. Pursuing these defenses, however, will be expensive and involve risk for both parties.

As I mentioned in our phone conversation last year and reiterated in the letter, FNW understands Texas A&M's desire to preserve its rights in its trademark the "12th Man". As such, we once again suggest the best solution is for a rights fee to be paid to Texas A&M for a specific and limited use of the phrase. Specifically, we are seeking the right to use the term in reference to our fans in conjunction with market and branding activities, advertising campaigns and promotions and in stadium activities. We have no desire to profit financially from the use. We will not use the term in conjunction with the sale of any merchandise. We will not allow the term to be used in a derogatory manner. The Seahawks simply desire to use the term as a general designation to honor our fans and recognize their support.

For this limited right, the Seahawks are willing to pay your client a one time license payment of $10,000 for a 10 year use. This solution preserves your rights, limits our scope and becomes a source of income.

I look forward to your response to our proposal.

Sincerely,

Seattle's 12th man irks Aggies

By JEFF CAPLAN
Star-Telegram Staff Writer

The Seattle Seahawks credit their run to Super Bowl XL on the arm of their emergent quarterback, the legs of their MVP running back and the stripped-raw vocal cords of their fervent fans, the long-exalted 12th man.

As a salute to the roaring crowds that used to blow the roof off the old Kingdome, the franchise retired the No. 12 back in 1984. But, it wasn't until billionaire Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen bought the team in the late 1990s and cozy Qwest Field opened in 2002 that the 12th man tradition again swept up Seattle's fandom.

The playoffs -- with the No. 12 flag waving high atop Seattle's Space Needle and another one flapping in the south end of the stadium -- have finally exposed Seattle's 12th man tradition to the rest of the nation, and a stunned College Station -- the official Home of the 12th Man, legally speaking.

Texas A&M officials are hot over what athletic director Bill Byrne termed Seattle's "brazen use of the 12th Man theme" in his Wednesday Internet column.

A&M, whose own 12th Man tradition dates back to 1922, holds two trademark registrations on "12th Man." Secured in 1990 and 1996, the trademarks include entertainment services, "namely organizing and conducting intercollegiate sporting events," and products, such as caps, T-shirts, novelty buttons and jewelry.

Byrne wrote that the Chicago Bears and Buffalo Bills had previously halted their own 12th man themes once the university made them aware of the trademark registrations. A&M has contacted the Seahawks twice.

"In the normal course of action, once someone becomes aware of it and they understand that you have a registered trademark, normally they cease," said Steve Moore, A&M's chief marketing officer. "In this case they have chosen not to, but we are still hopeful that they will, quite frankly."

Lance Lopes, the Seahawks' vice president of corporate partnerships/legal affairs, said he would not comment on whether the team would meet A&M's request.

"I will say this," Lopes said. "Our fans have been the folks that have run with the 12th man. It has not been the organization itself. We raise a flag with a 12 on it, it doesn't say 12th man or anything like that. We retired the jersey No. 12 many, many years ago and we've always sort of kept it under that context."

"But, in terms of this whole 12th man derivative, if you will, that's occurred in the mass media and the public here locally. It has not been generated by the organization, per se."

At a recent fan rally, Seahawks cheerleaders couldn't distribute No. 12 buttons fast enough. The team's pro shop is sold out of No. 12 replica game jerseys and No. 12 flags.

The Web site, SeaHawkers.org, the official site of the team's booster club, offers downloadable computer desktop wallpaper that reads: "At Home We are the 12th Man" and "On the Road We are the 12th Man."

"There's 12th man towels on eBay and all types of 12th man merchandise that we've seen," A&M's Moore said. "We really have no way of knowing whether the Seahawks are putting that out or not."

The home page of the Seahawks' official Web site features a promotional advertisement with Ram Restaurant and Bar called "12th Man at the Ram." The winner lands 12 seats in front of the big screen at the popular sports bar to watch the Seahawks play the Pittsburgh Steelers in the Super Bowl on Feb. 5.

Jeff Chandler, a marketing and promotions staff member for the Ram chain, said he was unaware of the 12th Man trademark, and said his company works directly with the Seahawks.

"This is a promotion done in conjunction with them," Chandler said. "They are the ones that approved our ad."

A&M's 12th Man trademark has evolved into more than tradition and heritage. It is something of a franchise in itself, including The 12th Man Foundation, A&M's fundraising arm that funds 12th Man scholarships, 12th Man Magazine and 12th Man merchandise.

The university's last resort is to take the Seahawks to court, a proposition that could be costly, and one Moore said A&M is not prepared to do just yet.

"What we hope," Moore said, "is that the normal course of action will work, and that they'll choose to recognize our ownership of the trademark."

Geoff Mantooth, a Fort Worth-based registered patent and trademark attorney, said A&M might be able to win a court battle. He said A&M could seek damages for past infringement, stop future infringement and even ask for the Seahawks' profits on any 12th man merchandise.

"They [the Seahawks] might think they can fight it because you have a professional sports franchise with deep pockets versus a public university," said Mantooth, who is a former student at Texas A&M, but has no role with the university or this matter. "Public universities in the last few years have gotten more aggressive in protecting their patent and trademark rights because they see them as sources of revenue."
